Every woman, secretly or otherwise, likes to be admired. And, to be sure, what is more natural, or, indeed, more praiseworthy? And every woman knows that unless her own particular style is suited and her appearance thereby enhanced, she will not attract the admiration she ought to have. This fact has been well kept in mind by our buyers. Our stocks have been chosen with the idea of adding charm and grace to the wearers of our garments. Our suits and coats are not noted for fantastc style, but for unobtrusive refinement. We have selected modes to suit every figure and face. Our hats have been designed by expert milliners, who can distinguish between freakishness and stylish simplicity. We have taken great care in marking the prices of our suits and hats. Some of our best styles are priced very moderately. Come in, and let us show you our selections.

Table Linen

Linens are good purchases now. The wholesale houses are almost entirely sold out, and prices are soaring. We were fortunate in securing a good line of table linens, and are able to offer them at the old prices, 25 per cent less than the new linens will be.

New Velvets

Soft, lustrous, splendid, new velvets, coming in every week, to fill up our depleted stocks. All the new shades-Havannah, Bronze, Burgundy, Ferret, Army Blue-in prices from $1.00, $1.50, $2.00, up to the Chiffon Velvets at $4.00.

Chiffon Taffetas

One can easily understand the popularity of this fabric for its delicate beauty is surely wonderfully attractive. At $1.50 and $2.00.

New Hats

Every day we receive a new shipment of charming hats, in every shape and style one's heart could desire. Tomorrow we shall offer a few good selections at $5.00.

RAISE ROSES BY THE TON Cities, During Winter, Cultivate Flowers Under Glass.

How flowers are grown in winter is as much of a mystery to many intelligent people as is their high price and scarcity just when they are most wanted. Spells of extreme cold, with dull and cloudy weather, is to them only an incident, while to the rose grower it is a serious handicap.

Very few people realize how much money is invested in the business of growing roses or cut flowers. In the infancy of the business a greenhouse, 100 by 20, was considered very large. In many establishments houses are now seen 500 to 600 feet in length, with a width of fifty to seventy-five feet. In fact, houses covering an acre of ground are now quite common. as one large house is found to be more economically managed than a number of smaller structures covering the same area of ground.

Roses were first forced for winter cutting in Boston, Mass., which city for a time supplied the country with Eonsilene and Soffrano roses. New York and Philadelphia were, however, soon in the work, and before long not ly supplied their own market, but enjoyed a large shipping trade.

Chicago has now the largest supply. more acres of glass being devoted to the business there than in any other city of the country.

Many cities and towns within a radius of 1,000 miles of Chicago de pend on that city for their supply.

One of the largest growers for the Philadelphia market is the Joseph Beacock Co. of Roelofs, Pa. The greenhouses of this corporation cover about two acres of ground. They are up-to-date in every respect, of iron frame set in concrete, made light in structure, to admit all the sun possible and properly ventilate.

THESE ARE ODD NAMES. Ship Cargoes of Old Had Strange Designations.

What are Nankins, Boglepores Sinchaws, Lutestrings and Pelons? No! They are not names of orien tal rags and lutestrings have no refcrence to musical instruments. Few people in Boston can today tell you J. Messerly; Ceres, Mae Stahl; Powhat these names refer to, and yet a century ago everybody in the city had an intimate acquaintance with them.

Lying at a Boston wharf on May 13, 1800, was the good ship Eliza. Capt. Rowan, from Canton, China, She was a remarkably fast sailing vessel, off the stocks less than four years, with newly coppered bottom and unusually well armed for a merchant vessel of that time.

She had been in port but a few days and on the date mentioned was sold at public auction, together with her cargo, by J. & T. H. Perkins, a leading firm of auctioneers at the time.

These facts are set forth in the columns of a Boston newspaper, the Massachusetts Mercury, of May 13, 1800, and the advertisement an nouncing the nature of her cargo and the sale appeared in print several times before the date of the auction.

The cargo was listed in lots, for convenience at the sale, and these itemized lots give a clear idea of the kinds and colors of the materials which comprised the home and street dress of men and women in Boston at that date. By a brief study of the lots offered for sale in this cargo the explanation of the names mentioned in the first paragraph of this article is apparent. Of Nankins there were 690,000 yards; of Boglepores there were 5,400 yards; of Sinchaws there were 5,490 yards; of Lutestrings there were 6,678 yards: and of Peions there were 4,500 yards.

GIRL AVIATOR INSTRUCTS.

Teaches School Children at Texan Military Colleges.

Practical Instruction in aviation for school children by a young girl aviator probably is the latest addition to the curricula of military colleges and high schools. The new course has been tried out with the school children of the San Antonio (Tex.) military colleges and high schools, and has proved an instantaneous success.

The pupils were taught the principles of aerodynamics in the class room. Then each student body elected one of their number to undertake the coveted duty of experiencing a real flight with the aviatrice. She thereupon took the lucky candidates aloft in her Wright biplane for twenty-minute rides. The machine was equipped with duel control, and the pupils were allowed to manipulate the warning and elevator levers. Following these practical lessons in the science of aviation, each amateur aviator was required to deliver a speech before his classmates, telling "how it felt." Much enthusiasm was developed and straightway several model aviation clubs were established in San Antonio.

No less interesting than the flights was the aviatrice, Miss Katherine Stinson, and her wonderful control of her machine. Miss Stinson owns and flies two aeroplanes, one a Wright biplane and the other a machine of her own design. She is the proud possessor of pilot license 148, from the Aero Club of America. She has made 1,165 flights, and she has carried 500 passengers.—Technical

Food Value of Milk

4------Good mifk is the most valuable single article of diet known to man, while bad, impure, so-called "loose milk," is one of the most dangerous foods possible. In clean, pure, pasteurized milk we have the one perfect food for the human being, and the education of the consumer in the care of milk should go hand in hand with the increased demands made on the milk farmer for a cleaner, higher grade of milk, and on the distributor for greater care in the handling of the product, bringing it to your door clean and not contaminated with any bacteria which would cause disease.

It is a well known fact that the average housewife, living in the town or city, knows comparatively nothing about the milk that is supplied to her

She knows nothing as to where the milk comes from that is delivered at her door each day, and she knows almost as little about how the milk is cared for, once it has reached her refrigerator. If the housewife inspects her kitchen and refrigerator each day, she sees in it a bottle of milk; possibly the milk may be in a bowl or pitcher but the chances are that nine times out of ten, whatever container the milk is in, it is uncovered.

The milk is left to absorb every odor from every particle of food in the ice box, which it does as greedily as a sponge absorbs water.

If the milk is not in the ice box it may be left in a warm pantry or on the kitchen table uncovered. In the summer time it offers an ideal drinking fountain for the typhoid fly, which is sure to haunt the kitchen of the careless housewife.

Or, if the city apartment house is the home, the milk reaches the kitch en by the dumb waiter shaft, or the servant elevator after it has been handled by any number of hands. mostly dirty.

At one apartment which I once lived I was horribly shocked one morning upon opening the dumbwaiter shaft door to find my bottle of cream closely nestled against a garbage can and the contents of many waste baskets from other apartments emptied around it. This was my first awakening as to the manner in which my milk was being delivered to me each morning. I perhaps had seen it at its worst, but it was the last time I saw it in this condition, for I immediately made other arrangements for the delivery of

Sometimes it takes a rude awakening to bring us to our senses.

If the tenement house flat is the home it may be left at the door of the poor woman if she can afford to buy bottled milk, where any stray cat or dog can inspect it and then it is opened without washing the outside of the This was true last summer, when, riding early Sunday morning out into the country, all along the outskirts of the city, we noticed bottles of milk standing on the porch, while the sun beating down upon them and within easy reach of any stray cats or dogs. Most of these were houses of apparently a thrifty class, and if they had only thought of the danger their milk was subjected to, I am quite sure they would have found a place where the milkman could have left it in the shade and out of the reach of hungry animals. The careless handling of a product the most delicate is due to one of two causes-either the housewife is indifferent to the health of her family, or she is ignorant as to the effect of such careless handling of milk. One knows to the health of her family: hence we must conclude that the careless handling of milk in the home is due to ignorance. The champaign of education carried on through the recent milk shows has done more to educate the housewife and all other consumers of milk than that no housewife could be indifferent tons of printed books on the subject. Of what use is it for the federal government to enforce the pure food law, as it relates to milk, or for the individual state or for the city or the town to enact and enforce, at great expense, laws for the protection of the milk supply, or for the dairy farmer and the distributor of milk to expend large sums of money in producing and delivering a clean, pasteurized, pure supply of milk, when the ignorant and indifferent housewife, by her careless methods in the home nullifies all the work done by the federal, state or municipal authorities and renders useless the time and money spent by the farmer and distributor of

In many a home milk is treated with as little care as a bag of potatoes. No pains and no expense should be spared to educate the consumer of milk; first as to its food value, second as to the danger of contaminated milk from tubercular cattle, and third as to its care in the home If women were educated to appreciate the food value of pasteurized milk the campaign for its production would go forward by leaps and bounds. If consumers knew how dangerou to health is the consumption of any other kind of milk they would with one accord demand the best product and willingly pay the increased cost if required.

How to Prevent Croup. It may be a surprise to you to learn vented. Mrs. H. M. Johns, Elida, O., relates her experience as follows: little boy is subject to croup. During the past winter I kept a bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy in house, and when he began having that croupy cough I would give him one or two doses of it an i it would break the attack. I like it better for children than any other cough medicine be it. B. E. Durr, auctionser.
